Getting ready for May 5

Registration info, candidate filings

A farewell and a welcome in voter office

Friday will mark the last official day at the Jefferson County Courthouse for Bev Ringwald (right), a familiar face in the voter registration office for most of the last 19 years. Ringwald is retiring. She and her successor, Carsha Strouse (left), have been working hand in hand for several weeks to ensure a smooth transition, and, for Strouse to try to capture the institutional memory Ringwald has amassed in the office that oversees the administration of elections, candidate filings and campaign finance reports, and manages polling place assignments and maintains precinct information. Strouse has worked in the county clerk's office, which is the umbrella office for the voter registration office, since 2013. Friends and colleagues will say goodbye to Ringwald at the Broadway Hotel Friday afternoon from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. The event is open and the public is welcome. (Courier staff photo by Mark Campbell)

Pittman sworn in to county surveyor post

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

Mike Pittman was nominated and elected Jefferson County surveyor at a Republican Party caucus Monday night and will serve the remainder of Jeff Daghir's unexpired term.

Pittman was sworn in Tuesday morning. A Republican, Daghir held the office until his resignation Jan. 6.

"Jeff had to step down after he moved to Scipio to be closer to a job he's taking with Cummins Diesel in Columbus," said Jefferson County Republican Party Chairman Karl Eaglin, noting that the surveyor is considered a part-time position and Daghir had an opportunity for a full-time job. "It's a good opportunity for Jeff and it will be a lot better for him than having to make that hour-and-10 minute drive to and from work."

Eaglin said Daghir, who is not a licensed surveyor, contracted with professional surveyors to conduct the surveys necessary to establish county property boundaries and resolve disputes and that Pittman, who also is not a licensed surveyor, could handle the job in similar fashion.

Pittman, who lives in Madison, noted he has worked with many surveyors over the years while rehabilitating houses and dealing with property lines and setbacks so he is familiar with the process. He said it is not unusual for a county to have a person holding the surveyor's office who is not a licensed surveyor.

Pittman spent much of his first day on the job Tuesday filling out forms and other paperwork related to his new duties and securing the insurance bond county surveyors are required to carry. He said that after a career in executive management with healthcare corporations, paperwork is something he knows well but the rest of the job will take some time to become familiar.

"I'm kind of in the dark about some of that," Pittman said. "Get back to me in about a month and I'll be able to better answer questions."

Pittman will serve Daghir's unexpired term but the office will also come up on the May primary ballot ahead of the November general election. Eaglin said he hopes Pittman will be a candidate for the office.

The county surveyor also serves as director of the Jefferson County Planning & Zoning Office, is a voting member of the Plan Commission by virtue of the elected position, and a technical non-voting adviser to the Board of Zoning Appeals.

A primary candidate for Madison City Council last year, Pittman is a new member of the City of Madison's Historic District Board of Review. City officials are researching whether Pittman can continue to serve on that board while holding a county office. So far they have not found a conflict, they said, so he will likely be able to continue to serve on the Board of Review since it is an unpaid position.

Monday's GOP caucus also filled a second position created when Patrick Thevenow was elected to Madison City Council last November and began serving voters in District 1 this year. Thevenow had previously served on the Madison Township Advisory Board but Patty Wallace will now serve in that seat.

City's Historic Board delays move to revise guidelines

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

The City of Madison's Historic Board of Review has decided to set aside work to revise its guidelines and application process until the new city administration has time to make a more comprehensive study of the district in the coming months.

The matter came up during the "Old Business" portion of Tuesday night's regular Historic Board of Review meeting when Chairman Josh Wilber asked board members if it made sense to delay further consideration on any changes since new surveys and possible ordinance changes might be forthcoming.

"With the new administration having come in and the possibility of a new survey, which will be nice to have, there could be some ordinance changes but we don't know if there will be," Wilber said. "Should we take it off of our agenda for now?"

"It seems to me the design guidelines are based on the ordinance so we should wait until the ordinance is in place before going ahead to finalize the guidelines," said board member Thomas Stark.

Mayor Bob Courtney told the board last week that he intended to conduct a comprehensive survey of historic structures and neighborhoods throughout the city — both downtown and on the hilltop — to identify structures and neighborhoods in need of preservation and prioritize them based on condition, historic significance and impact to the city in terms of renovation and beautification.

Courtney said the project also would look at ways to expedite the application process and provide incentives for individual property owners and neighborhoods to restore structures that are in need of attention and could involve some changes to the historic district ordinance.

"I think the survey will be important to have," said board member Mike Pittman.

Wilber said the survey could help lay the groundwork for what changes the board needs to make in terms of the guidelines and the application process and that could help make the overall process easier for both property owners and the board.

"I think both will make a huge difference in what we are doing. We've got a great start to it. We just may need to change some things because of those two elements that could make some big impacts for us," Wilber said before deciding to remove the item from the board's agenda for now.

"This way we wouldn't have to have it on our notices for the public. We could take it off of our notices until we have those additional elements and then put it back on when we are ready to go forward," Wilber said.

Woman appealing conviction in fatal school bus crash

Indiana

ROCHESTER — A woman convicted in a crash that killed three children who were crossing a highway to board a school bus is appealing her conviction, contending that the tragedy was "just an accident and not a crime," her attorney said Tuesday. A notice of appeal was filed Jan. 17 with the Indiana Court of Appeals on behalf of Alyssa Shepherd, 25, of Rochester. She was convicted in October by a Fulton County jury of three counts of reckless homicide, criminal recklessness and passing a school bus, causing injury. Stacy Uliana, the attorney representing Shepherd, said a brief that will include the arguments in her client's appeal will not be filed for months. "We are appealing because although the accident is a heart-wrenching tragedy, we believe it is still just an accident and not a crime," Uliana told WRTV-TV in an email. A judge sentenced Shepherd in December to four years in prison for the Oct. 30, 2018, crash that killed 6-year-old twin brothers Xzavier and Mason Ingle, and their 9-year-old sister, Alivia Stahl, and seriously injured a fourth child. Shepherd, who was also sentenced to three years of house arrest and three years of probation, was driving her pickup truck when she hit all four children as they crossed two-lane State Road 25 in Rochester to board the bus. At the time of her arrest, Shepherd told authorities she didn't realize that she was approaching a stopped school bus, despite the activated stop arm and flashing lights. Court documents show Shepherd told police she saw the lights but didn't recognize the vehicle as a school bus until the children were right in front of her. After the crash, the Indiana Legislature increased penalties for drivers who illegally pass stopped school buses.

2 officers not liable in teen's custody death

INDIANAPOLIS — A federal appeals court ruled two Indianapolis police officers will not be held liable for the 2015 death of a black teenager who died in police custody after telling officers that he was struggling to breathe. The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals found there was no evidence the officers were aware that Terrell Day's breathing troubles after the 18-year-old's shoplifting arrest were caused or exacerbated by his handcuffs as he laid on the ground, "as opposed to his exertion during the chase preceding his arrest." The decision issued Jan. 10 reverses a federal judge's ruling last May that mostly sided with attorneys for Day's mother and determined that "reasonable officers would know they were violating an established right by leaving Day's hands cuffed behind his back after he complained of difficulty breathing." The appeals court noted in its decision that Day weighed about 312 pounds and had an underlying heart condition, The Indianapolis Star reported. It found that the officers' conduct was not "obviously unlawful" because the handcuffs were used in a manner that would not have harmed an average arrestee. Day died Sept. 26, 2015, after he was arrested in connection with a shoplifting incident at an Indianapolis clothing store where a loss-prevention officer alleged Day had tried to take a watch. A security guard then saw a gun in Day's pocket after he fled the store. By the time police caught up to Day, he'd collapsed onto a patch of grass behind a nearby gas station. A gun was found at the scene. Day was pronounced dead after paramedics tried unsuccessfully to revive him. Day's mother, Shanika Day, sued the two Indianapolis Metropolitan Police Department officers and the city of Indianapolis in 2017, alleging excessive force and negligence led to her son's death. She and her attorneys also believe race played a factor in his death. They plan to ask the appeals court to reconsider the ruling.

Bill would limit under-18 marriage

INDIANAPOLIS — Lawmakers could make it more difficult for anyone younger than 18 to get married. The bill is advancing after a House committee heard from women who were 15 or 16 when their parents forced them to marry men who had raped or molested them and then faced more abuse before being able to escape the relationship. Current law allows those younger than 18 to marry if they have parental consent. The state health department said 95 people between the age of 15 and 17 got married in 2018. A proposal being considered would make 18 the general age for marriage. The only exception would be a 17-year-old if the intended spouse isn't more than four years older and a juvenile court judge gives permission. Bill sponsor Republican Rep. Karen Engleman of Georgetown said her goal is to make sure both people in a marriage are on equal footing. The House Judiciary Committee endorsed the bill 9-1 Monday, sending it to the full House for consideration.

Angler snags apparent live grenade in river

GARY — A man fishing from a bridge reeled in an apparent live grenade, prompting a road closure until the device was removed by a bomb squad. A Gary police officer who was called to the Little Calumet River bridge Monday evening to investigate learned that a man who had been fishing from the bridge pulled up what appeared to be a live grenade, The (Northwest Indiana) Times reported. The road over the bridge was temporarily closed and the Porter County Bomb Squad was called for assistance. The bomb squad took possession of the grenade without incident, said Gary Police Lt. Dawn Westerfield.

Gary schools warned on enrollment incentives

GARY — State officials have put the Gary Community School Corp. on notice for violating law by offering enrollment incentives last fall. The district posted on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram offering $25 Visa gift cards to parents who referred students to successfully enroll in Gary schools, Northwest Indiana Times reported. The posts said those students also would be entered in a raffle to receive an iPad. Indiana law explicitly prohibits any public, charter or private schools who receive state scholarship funding to offer incentives in the form "of any item that has monetary value, including cash or a gift card." Indiana's enrollment incentive statute was passed in 2015, after a similar promotion was offered by an Indianapolis charter school. "We thought that was not the right way to encourage people to go to school," said State Rep. Bob Behning, chair of the House Education Committee. "We wanted parents to make a choice based on academics, not on a prize being awarded." The incentive offer was posted online with a Sept. 13 deadline — the same day all Indiana districts were required to submit student enrollment totals to the Indiana Department of Education for verification. State school funding is directly tied to student enrollment. While Gary schools saw no increases in enrollment as a result of their social media posts, a review of social media posts will be conducted as a part of the state board's next routine audit of Gary schools.

Kentucky

Democrat seeks to fight GOP transgender bills

FRANKFORT — A transgender candidate for the Kentucky House is criticizing three GOP bills affecting the transgender community. One measure would prohibit students from using public restrooms that don't align with their "biological sex," another would make it a felony for doctors to prescribe gender-altering medications to minors, and a third would require student-athletes to play sports based on the sex listed on their birth certificate, the Courier Journal reported. Democrat Ramona Thomas, who began transitioning in 2017, told the newspaper Tuesday that she wants to fight to protect transgender youth. Thomas is running for a House seat to represent southwestern Jefferson County. "These bills are the end result of LGBT people, and transpeople, not being present in our government for so long," Thomas said. The newspaper said the Republican sponsors of the bills didn't respond to requests for comment. State Rep. Savannah Maddox, who sponsored the bill regarding medical treatment for children to alter gender, argued on Facebook that "it is not the right of a parent to permanently alter a child's gender or identity, even when based upon certain behaviors or perceptions of a child's mind which has not yet had time to fully develop."

$1M grant to help hemp processing

FRANKFORT — A company that specializes in storing and processing Kentucky-grown hemp for the purpose of cannabidiol oil extraction and refinement will benefit from a $1 million grant. Gov. Andy Beshear and the Department for Local Government announced the Community Development Block Grant to Mount Vernon on Tuesday. The grant is to help a local company, Kentucky Farmaceuticals, develop its business and assist with job creation, Beshear's office said in a news release. The project is expected to create 50 full-time jobs over the first two years. Mount Vernon will use the funding to purchase equipment to lease to the company, the release said.

House OKs $2.5M for veterans nursing home

FRANKFORT — The Kentucky House voted unanimously to approve $2.5 million for design and preliminary work for a veterans nursing home in Bowling Green. The funding would be in addition to the $10.5 million in state bond funding allocated by the 2017 General Assembly, lawmakers said. The proposed 90-bed facility would be the first veterans' nursing home in south-central Kentucky and the fifth statewide. The bill was approved by the House Monday and now goes to the Senate.

Physician to head public health department

FRANKFORT — Dr. Steven Stack has been named commissioner of Kentucky's Department for Public Health. Stack is an emergency physician at Saint Joseph Hospital East in Lexington, and has also served as medical director for the hospital. He has also worked at other Kentucky hospitals and in Tennessee and Ohio. He is also a former president of the American Medical Association. Kentucky Cabinet for Health and Family Services Acting Secretary Eric Friedlander said in a release from the cabinet that Stack is a seasoned health care policy advocate and educator. He said in the new role he will be a leader of the entire state public health system and help make resources and care more accessible. Stack will begin on Feb. 10.

Bill aims to more off aid, into workforce

FRANKFORT — House Republican leaders introduced legislation Monday aimed at shifting more people off public assistance and into the workforce. The measure, designated a top priority as House Bill 1, takes aim at a long-running problem — the state's low workforce participation rate, House leaders said. "If we can help people get back on their feet and get out in the workforce, that's going to benefit everyone," Speaker Pro Tem David Meade told reporters. The bill seeks to resolve situations that discourage some people from working longer hours or getting better-paying jobs because they can then lose public benefits. Part of the measure focuses on reliance on Medicaid. It calls for the state to seek a federal waiver so Medicaid-eligible people can be covered by their employer's health insurance plan instead. The state would pay that person's share of premiums. If the employer doesn't offer health insurance, the person would obtain coverage through the federal marketplace. The state would pick up the premium costs for one year. "No one should have to make that choice, whether they're going to provide insurance and security for their families or go out and make more money," Meade said.

Imam pleads guilty in kidnap, laundering

LEXINGTON — A Islamic leader accused of involvement in a murder-for-hire plot pleaded guilty Monday to some of the charges against him. Mahmoud Shaker Shalash entered guilty pleas in federal court to conspiring to kidnap someone and two counts of money laundering, according to court records obtained by the Lexington Herald-Leader. The former imam of the Islamic Center of Lexington also was accused of trying to hire a hit man in May 2019, but that count was dismissed as part of the plea agreement, according to court records. A law enforcement informant posing as a hit man first met with Shalash in the spring of 2019, according to affidavits filed in federal court. Shalash told the informant a person owed him $80,000 and asked the informant to do whatever he had to do get the money back, including breaking the person's legs. Two associates of Shalash later asked the informant to kill a second person they believed had cheated them in business deals, the affidavits said. The co-defendants are scheduled for trial in February. The first meetings with the informant also involved talks of money laundering, in which Shalash said he ran a "business" involving theft, storage, transportation and selling of items that "traveled in foreign and interstate commerce," according to the plea agreement. While Shalash could have faced life in prison, the plea agreement recommends he serve just over four years with five years of supervision afterward and pay a fine of $20,000. Shalash is scheduled for sentencing in June.

Fleeing driver fatally shot near deadly crash

DORTON — The driver of a vehicle fleeing from authorities and heading toward a separate fatal crash scene was shot to death by troopers Tuesday morning, Kentucky State Police said. State police were at the scene of a fatal crash in eastern Kentucky, near the Virginia border, when they were notified of a fleeing vehicle heading in their direction, authorities told news outlets. Troopers at the scene of the crash on State Route 805 left to pursue the vehicle "in an attempt to protect the scene of the crash," state police said in a news release. Trooper William Petry said the 16-mile chase ended yards away from the fatal crash. He said the driver was heading straight toward multiple first responders. Troopers fired at the driver, the release said. "A vehicle is basically a deadly weapon if it's used that way and if it had got to the scene of the fatal crash, more than one person would have been in danger," said Petry. The driver's name wasn't immediately released. No one else was in the vehicle at the time, police said. The shooting happened between Jenkins and Dorton, about 115 miles southeast of Lexington. Authorities did not release details about the fatal crash that had preceded the shooting.

Charlie's Beat

Woody Woodmansee is a mild mannered keyboard superhero

By CHARLIE ROHLFING

If you partake of the local live music scene at all, chances are very good you've seen keyboardist extraordinaire Woody Woodmansee working his magic with any number of different bands.

"These days I play with the Jordan Wilson Coalition, Robert Reynolds' band, Amy Noel, and I used to play with The Wheel back when they were going," Woodmansee said. "I love when Bill Lancton calls me, it's a real treat to play with him. I've also played some of the big Red Bike ensemble shows, like The Last Waltz and the Stevie Ray Vaughn tribute shows. Oh, and Live at Filmore East too. But it all started with Jimmy Davis.

"I was in town playing at the Regatta, must have been '04 or '05 with a band called Big Diggity, and Jimmy Davis caught our set. He invited me to play with his band, and for the next several years I was pretty much his go-to keyboardist."

I remember vividly when Woody showed up on the scene with Jimmy, although at the time I didn't know his name or his story. All of a sudden there was this smokin' good keyboard player, bouncing up and down on his piano stool, taking the whole thing to a higher level.

"Proportionally, for the size of Madison, there's an energy and passion that I don't see in bigger towns and cities," Woodmansee said. "The entire community appreciates what's happening and comes out to support live music. I love playing here.

Woody Woodmansee

"I feel like I've grown musically since I've been coming to Madison, too. I get to experience new styles of music I might not have tried. I've met lots of new people. And when you look at Jordan or Amy or Robert Reynolds, any of these bands could blow up big someday, and I hope to be along for the ride."

But the whole music thing is really an alter ego these days, like when Clark Kent takes off his shirt to reveal the big 'S' underneath. By day David "Woody" Woodmansee lives in Louisville where he's co-founder and owner of a successful full-service advertising agency called OOHology. He runs the web development team as Chief Technology Officer. But at night, he comes out to play.

"I was actually a professional musician for many years, out on the road full time with a band called People Noise for about 5 years. I also played with Big Diggity, as I mentioned, and a band called the Louisville Merry Pranksters, a Dead cover band. I play in Louisville a lot, not just in Madison," Woodmansee said.

"I'm in a Louisville band called The Low Glow that's very rootsy and Americana. We write our own originals for that band. And I'm in another band called Rusty Dimes & The Good Times that's classic soul, funk and party music."

If it sounds like Woody covers a lot of musical styles, you're right, but his first love is old school metal. "I grew up with the heavy stuff. Eighties thrash like Testament, Anthrax and early Metallica." In fact, I can't remember ever NOT seeing Woody wearing a Slayer T-shirt on stage. It's his version of a Superman suit, I guess.

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK:

Friday at Red Bicycle Hall the amazing singer-songwriter Chis Knight is playing a solo show, and it is sure to sell out. Check the Red Bike website to see if tickets are still available. Saturday you can perform a live music hat trick here in Madison. Start the evening at 7 p.m. at Mad Paddle Brewery with country artist Jerod Bolt. Judging from his resume, he's the real deal. At 8 p.m. walk over to Red Bicycle Hall for the talented roots/folk duo Jackopierce. And then after that show you can stroll on down to the Taproom to catch the late night garage-rock band Brother O Brother. It will be super loud and super awesome, I guarantee!

Charlie Rohlfing is a retired advertising man and partner in The Red Bicycle Hall music venue. Look for his distinctive fedora bobbing above the crowd, anywhere live local music is happening.

Friends & Teammates

LOCAL PANTHERS: Madison High School graduate Katie Hartman (4) and Switzerland County High School graduate Brooke Todd (21) have been teammates at Hanover College for the past four years. The former rivals have become best friends at Hanover. (Staff photo by David Campbell)

Former high school rivals Hartman & Todd have created tight bond at Hanover College

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

First as rivals, then as teammates, Katie Hartman and Brooke Todd have built the kind of friendship that only comes from respect and competition. They've seen each other at their best — as well as their worst — and the bond that has been forged has only gotten stronger with time.

The two local high school products — Hartman from Madison and Todd from Switzerland County — are both closing out their senior seasons at Hanover College as starters on the women's basketball team and while each will go their separate ways after graduation, they'll never be that far apart.

"They'll be in each other's weddings," Hanover women's coach John Jones said. "We always say that to recruits when they're looking here. 'Here's your future bridesmaids' because it's just happened over and over and over."

There's no telling when they first squared off against each other, possibly in summer basketball or maybe in junior high. But as freshman stars on their respective high school teams, the two began a four-year rivalry on Nov. 9, 2012 at Switzerland County, the infamous "air conditioner game." A faulty air conditioner that was leaking on the floor forced cancellation of the rest of the game, with Madison leading 37-2 early in the third quarter.

Hartman was a freshman on a Madison team that would win 18 games while Todd was a member of a talented freshman class that would rebuild the proud Switzerland County program.

Over the next four years, the two would help lead their teams to regional championship games, Hartman in 2014 and Todd in 2015. And every year, during the first week of the season, their teams would square off with the two point guards tasked with defending each other.

"When I played against her in high school, I was always the one that was going to have to guard her and I was like 'Oh my gosh, Brooke Todd,'" Hartman said, then added with a laugh. "I always joke with her saying, 'you're always in The Madison Courier. Why are you in my Courier?'"

"We would play and I was like, 'Oh, I'm guarding Katie' and we just knew that was the competitive nature in both of us, we wanted to win, we wanted to lead our teams, we were both point guards," Todd said. "We never got that win and lost all four years. But, we lost by five my senior year and Kelsi (Konkle) and McKenzie (Matthews) were both out, I just want to get that out there."

By the time they both committed to Hanover as high school seniors, they had gotten to know each other

WRESTLING

Cub frosh Skinner gets top seed at Sectional

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Madison, Southwestern and Switzerland County each have one top-seeded wrestler going into this weekend's IHSAA Sectional at Jennings County.

Madison freshman Van Skinner, who has accumulated an impressive 40-3 record in his rookie campaign, is the top seed at 170 pounds while Southwestern junior Brady McLain, who is 28-4, is the No. 1 seed at 195 pounds. Switzerland County junior Jacob Wolf (27-8) is the top seeded wrestler at 132 pounds.

In all, Madison had nine wrestlers seeded in the top four — second in the sectional field to only Columbus East's 10 — and 12 wrestlers total receive top six seeds. The top four finishers in each weight class advance to the regional round.

Madison had two other grapplers, Bryce Turner (37-7) at 113 pounds and Mason Long (35-9) at 152 pounds, earn No. 2 seeds while Southwestern had three wrestlers earn No. 2 seeds, Cameron Canada (25-8) at 120, Brandon Smith (20-1) at 145, and Mitchell Adcock (25-5) at 170.

Madison guts out 2OT victory

By ROB LAFARY

Madison and North Harrison sit on opposite sides of next week's Class 3A Sectional 30 bracket and if Tuesday night's regular season matchup ends up being a preview of a potential sectional championship game next Saturday, the rematch has the makings of a classic postseason battle.

In a game featuring 18 ties and 12 lead changes, Madison shrugged off a sluggish second half start and battled the Lady Cougars through regulation and an extra eight minutes to eventually pull away for an impressive 68-61 win in double overtime at Salm Gymnasium.

The Lady Cubs have now won three of their last four games and in the process captured their fourth win over a sectional foe this season.

"We knew coming into this, that this was going to be a tough game," Madison head coach Sonja Bowyer said. "North Harrison is big, well prepared and have some good wins. From the start of the game it was back-and-forth and it was a close one and we had to dig down deep and play as a team. This gives us a ton of confidence heading into next week."

After leading at both stops in the first half, Madison surrendered its lead after a 6-0 North Harrison run to start the third quarter and trailed up until the 5:38 mark of the fourth quarter when a pair of Jade Nutley free throws gave the Lady Cubs a 46-45 advantage. The lead changed hands three more times from that point on.

Nutley hit two more freebies for another Cub lead at the 2:57 mark and Lundun Perry's bucket with 2:27 left made for a 50-48 lead but the game was still tied at 50 as North Harrison's Lucy Robertson stepped up to the free-throw line and knocked down a pair a free throws.

Madison's Taylor Lynch and North's Chloe Jacobi each swapped lone free throws with just under two minutes to go but with neither team able to score over the final 1:32, the two teams headed into the first overtime period after a three-point attempt for the Cougars smacked off the backboard with time expiring in regulation.

The two teams managed just four points each in the overtime as Nutley scored all four for Madison and North Harrison got a bucket each by Alli Saunders and Jacobi. The Cubs picked up one final momentum boost right off the start in double overtime and then ran with it. Paige Young drilled a 3-pointer from the corner 22 seconds into the second overtime and Madison never trailed the rest of the way.

The 58-55 lead reached seven points on back-to-back baskets by Perry and Nutley with just 1:58 remaining. Diana Burgher's jumper cut the deficit to 62-57 with 1:44 left but Madison answered with a 4-0 run on Dyer's bucket and two free throws by Young to push the advantage to nine points. With just 27 seconds left, North Harrison never trailed by less than the final seven point margin.

"Going out into the second overtime I just looked at our team and said whoever wants this game more is going to win it," Bowyer said. "We got that first basket out of the second overtime and it gave us some momentum. Paige (Young) hit that three and then we came down and got a stop and scored a bucket. I think from that moment we knew we were going to take this game and we weren't going to take no for an answer."

In order for Madison to persevere, it took the entire team to step up at key moments, an area that North Harrison struggled with for the majority of the night.

North Harrison (13-8) got everything it needed out of its top two leading scorers in Saunders, a 5-foot-9 sophomore and Robertson, a 6-foot-3 senior. Saunders kept the Cougars afloat in the first half with 13 points en route to 23 points on the night while Robertson had 10 points in the third quarter en route to a 20-point night but the rest of the team managed just a combined 18 points while Madison surged with a complete team effort.

Although Young and Nutley got their points, the Lady Cubs were put in a position to win thanks to the help of their supporting cast.

Dyer kept Madison on top in the first half with seven of her 11 points on the night, finishing 5-of-7 from the field and grabbing six rebounds. Sophomore Lynch scored just five points but stuffed the stat sheet for 11 rebounds, seven assists and three steals while Perry scored all six of her points at crucial times in the second half and provided stability in the Cub backcourt.

"It takes a team to get it done," Bowyer said. "It doesn't matter if you're going in for a few minutes or just a few seconds, you got to go out and do your job for the team. We had several role players do their job and we did what we needed to do as a team to get that win so I was really happy about that."

But that doesn't go to say that Young and Nutley weren't instrumental. Young put together a well-balanced night in the scoring column and finished with a team-high 22 points and tied Lynch for three steals on the defensive end. Nutley, who battled Robinson in the post and struggled to score early, had 14 points in the second half and finished with another double-double on the year, this time totaling 20 points and 15 rebounds while also collecting five assists and three blocks.

"Paige (Young) had tears in her eyes tonight but would not let me take her out," Bowyer said. "She came in and battled and this was a season-high, maybe even a career-high scoring night for her. She came up big for us and she was all heart. Jade (Nutley) finally came out after halftime and said OK come with me and let's run with this. I've wanted to see them huddle up on the floor and get things together on their own and we did that tonight and Jade was instrumental in that."

Madison (13-8) closes out the regular season Thursday when it hosts Class A No. 1 Trinity Lutheran (21-2). The Cubs then open the Class 3A Sectional at Charlestown in the semifinals Feb. 7 when they face the winner between Charlestown and No. 6 Silver Creek.

• Hartman & Todd

well. After freshman year, when they roomed together, they became best friends.

"We went to camp here and that was fun and then we roomed together on the third floor at Donner as freshmen," Hartman said. "We've had a great ride together. She's one of my best friends."

That friendship has shown on the court. Both have started at Hanover since their freshman year and they have played huge roles in the Panthers' success over the years.

Todd has been the team's point guard from nearly day one. A scorer in high school — her career scoring mark was broken just two weeks ago — she has settled into the role of a pass-first point at Hanover and has excelled. While she averages just 6.1 points per game this year, she leads the team at 3.9 assists per contest.

"In high school, especially my senior year, I had to be a scorer. I can when I need to. But here, I like my position because I have these scorers on my team and I like to figure out how to get them the ball," Todd said. "It's been a lot of fun to not have all of that pressure of having to score but doing it when I need to and relying on other people who can do it. That's really cool for me."

One of those scorers is Hartman. Unshackled from her role as a high school point guard, Hartman has emerged as one the Panthers' go-to scorers. Her 12.3-points average this season is second only to preseason All-American Alexis Nall at 16.4 and she is shooting 40 percent from 3-point range while also averaging 4.6 rebounds per game.

"(In high school) I didn't feel like I had many opportunities. I was mainly looking for the open player and the open shot. Now as a two guard, I have a lot more confidence in my shot, I'm taking the basketball to the rim and it seems like I'm having a lot more opportunities for my shot," Hartman said. "I've really appreciated that change in position and perspective on the basketball court. It's been really fun."

"She had to move positions and she handled that better than I've ever seen anybody handle that situation," Todd said.

Jones had a chance to see both players up close for four years and was thrilled when he was able to ink both. But even he admits that they have been more than he could ever have hoped for.

"I had high expectations for both and they have exceeded those expectations. I don't think you say that lightly and I don't think you say that very often," Jones said. "They both come from very supportive families. There could have been plenty of times where one of them could have been upset with me about this or that, but they've come to every game and supported whether their kid was playing or not. And sometimes that's a lost art."

Hanover still has a month left in its regular season and while both players are hoping to get the school back to the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 2015 — their junior years in high school — they are also looking ahead to graduation.

Hartman will graduate with a degree in communications and a psychology minor and is looking at sports marketing as a career.

"I'm in the business scholars program as well and I'm wanting to do something with sports marketing maybe in the Indianapolis or Cincinnati area, somewhere fairly local. We'll see what kind of job I can get with that," Hartman said. "I'm wanting to be on the brand management part of things and I'm excited to see where it takes me."

Todd has a double-major in elementary education and health and movement and isn't quite sure which direction she will go.

"I do know that I want to stay competitive with basketball. I know that I'm going to have something to do with that in my life," Todd, the daughter of an educator and coach, said. "Coaching, teaching, some type of training, it's all up in the air right now. I'm waiting until after basketball to figure it out.

"I keep telling myself, 'you don't have to (coach)'. But it's like, yeah, I do. I can't stay away," she added with a laugh.

Regardless of what each decides, Jones knows both will be a success. But that doesn't mean he's ready to let them go.

"The biggest thing is, not what they've contributed to the basketball program but how they've handled themselves as student-athletes at Hanover College. They've been great teammates for all four years that they've been here," Jones said. "They are two of the best young ladies that I have ever been associated with and that is why senior day is going to be very, very difficult."

BRIDGE

BIDDING AND PLAY WERE BOTH SKILLFUL

Epictetus, a Greek philosopher who died in A.D. 135, said, "The greater the difficulty, the more glory in surmounting it. Skillful pilots gain their reputations from storms and tempests."

Epictetus was, of course, talking about boat pilots, airplanes being a few years in the future!

At the bridge table, anyone can draw trumps and cash winners to make a contract that is in no danger. But when the bidding and play get turbulent, the skillful players earn their wings.

What do you think of the auction to seven diamonds in today's deal? How did the captain handle the controls to land his contract safely after West led the club king?

The bidding was beautiful. South correctly opened in his longest suit, not in his major. Two clubs was fourth-suit game-forcing. Two spades simultaneously announced five spades and six diamonds, because with 5-5 South would have opened one spade, not one diamond. Three diamonds set the suit as trump. Four clubs was a control-bid indicating the ace. Four no-trump was Roman Key Card Blackwood, the reply showing two key cards (either two aces or one ace and the trump king) and the trump queen.

At trick two, declarer carefully cashed the diamond ace. (A diamond to dummy's king costs the contract.) When he saw the 4-0 split, South unblocked dummy's spades, trumped a club in his hand and ruffed a low spade with the diamond king. Declarer played a diamond to his nine, drew East's remaining trumps and claimed. Smooth!

The shelter also accepts aluminum and steel cans, which are recycled and the proceeds put toward the medical fund. The shelter asks that aluminum and steel donations be separated. Steel cans should also be rinsed before they are dropped off. Cans can be dropped off at anytime in a bin located on the east side of the shelter.

Those with missing pets can stop by the shelter, call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information, and a picture of the pet. Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption.

Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours.

FOXY

Foxy is a domestic shorthair cat. She is already spayed and up to date on her rabies shot. She loves to wander free and talk a lot. She came in with her brother and sister who are also spayed, neutered and up-to-date on their rabies shot. She is very photogenic when she sits still. She loves treats and "chirping" toys. She loves making new friends and would do best in a home where she can sit on your lap or in a window.

Worried about neighbors' infant outside in the rain and wind

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: We live across the street from a married couple — man and woman — who have a 16-month-old girl. Every time they get her out of the car, no matter what the weather is, they have nothing on her head. Even when the temperature was in the teens, and another time when it was pouring rain, there was nothing on her head.

I'm 60. I raised three daughters and always covered their heads with some kind of toboggan hat, hood or rain gear when appropriate.

The couple's defense, I'm sure, would be that they're just going from the car and up about 20 steps to the house, but still, I think it's ridiculous. I'm not sure if I should say something to them or not. Should I? — Neighbor

Dear Neighbor: Assuming that they have a jacket on the 16-month-old and the girl does not seem in distress, i.e., freezing or crying uncontrollably, it's probably better not to say anything. Perhaps you could buy her a really nice hat and bring it over as a neighborly present. Maybe they would get the hint.

Dear Annie: My heart goes out to "Bitter," who wrote about failed in vitro fertilization treatments and her bitter feelings toward her husband's brother and wife. They had encountered similar difficulties, and yet, knowing "Bitter" and her husband's struggle, they made a sudden announcement of their own pregnancy.

I, too, had difficulty getting pregnant, with my only pregnancy ending in miscarriage. The medical profession gave up on me. In fact, one day I happened to see my record and the diagnosis, "hostile environment." It broke me.

Not long afterward, I started working for a chiropractor and discussed my history with him. He took X-rays and found that I had a subluxation (vertebra out of place), where the nerves left my spine to control my reproductive organs. He said he felt that with regular adjustments to get my spine back in line, I could become pregnant within a year. Given that I was 39 years old, I had my doubts but kept them to myself. Five months later, I was pregnant. Three other patients in the practice who had difficulties getting pregnant were also able to become pregnant. We were quite a club! At the age of 40, I gave birth to a wonderful, healthy baby girl!

I'm not saying this is the answer for everyone, but after all the trials and suffering we went through, chiropractic seemed such a simple answer, and in my case it was: Due to a slight misalignment in my spine, my brain couldn't deliver messages to my reproductive organs in order to sustain a pregnancy. Once the spine was aligned and stayed that way, well, the proof is in my 27-year-old daughter! — Grateful

Dear Grateful: Whatever works. You sound like a wonderful mother and person, with a remarkable success story. Thank you for sharing your experience. I am printing your letter because it is important for everyone to know that there are many ways to boost fertility. There is some evidence that a healthy diet filled with fresh fruits, vegetables, and lean meats and fish can increase the chances of conception. Yoga and acupuncture are great things to try as well.
